PAT HARRISON MADE A GREAT SPEECH.

The few skinflints in Mississippi who would like, if they dared to, throw a brick at Senator Pat Harrison because of his convictions as to his duty in the last presidential campaign, would feel like crawling into a hole and pulling the hole in after them, if they would read the speech recently made in the United States senate by the Senator in opposition to the present tariff bill, and were capable of analyzing it.

The Senator showed that he has assiduously studied the question of imports and exports and that he has weighed the need of tariff taxes most scientifically and practically, and that he is well aware of the need of a tariff to raise revenue, or as Henry Watterson used to put it so cogently, "a tariff for revenue only", but that the proposition now before the senate means an increase of over $700,000,000 in taxes which will be passed on to the consumer. In short, that the already highly protected industries, which are enjoying the privileges of the highest tariff in all the history of the country, will have just the seven hundred millions more piled into their coffers. For example, the senate bill increases the tariff on maps 60 per cent; it is now 25 and the bill raises the tax 40 per cent. This means an additional charge on education. The Rand-McNally Co. asked this increase so that they "can compete with foreign lithographers".

It is passing strange, except when considered in the light of taking care of the already rich, that tariff rates should be increased. Everything is mountain high in price today.

Senator Harrison was catechised during his speech by the ablest sponsors of the tariff bill, but he turned every query against his questioners and before he had concluded, had several senatorial hides out drying.

The Senator's always pleasant demeanor was exhibited in his entire speech. His Republican friends loved him still more when his harpooning ceased.

The Senator also recently contributed a most illuminating article for the New York Tribune-Herald on the tariff question.

WILL HALT RECKLESS CAR DRIVING.

If all men would act as gentlemen, and if people were to live and act by the Golden Rule, why no laws would be needed. But unfortunately they will not do this, hence restrictive legislation is necessary from many angles, yes, from every angle.

The death toll from motorists is a problem all over the land. Last year 3761 people were injured at railroad crossings of which 2175 died. 227 people were killed in 1928 by driving into moving trains.

Something over 40 people have been killed by motorists and nearly 700 injured in the city of Memphis during this year. The death toll has become so great that the head of the police department has inaugurated a crusade against reckless autoists.

It is becoming hazardous to even drive out on the main highways. Not the least among road hazards is the truck. The heavy laden truck shoots by an auto with reckless impunity, knowing full well that the automobile is but a puny thing besides the big truck. We sometimes are ready to think that the autoists would be warranted in loading into his car a big Bertha to protect themselves against the reckless and don't give a d—truck driver.

Our highways should be fool proof. But how are we to do this, that's the question? Our answer is:

Require every driver to have a license. When he has one car accident, which the facts and circumstances show that he is in anywise responsible for, forbid his driving an auto for a period of 30 days. For a second accident, suspension of license for 60 days and for the third accident, 6 months suspension providing suitable other penalties in each case. The fourth accident should revoke driver's license entirely.

Jail the drunken car driver on sight and for the second offense confiscate his car. The folks have got to learn that the rights of others must be respected on the highways and that there shall at least be a semblance of law enforcement.

A GLANCE AT HARRISON COUNTY'S EXPENDITURES.

We always read the Pass Christian Tarpon with more than an ordinary degree of satisfaction and, while running through its columns of the issue of September 28, we glanced at Harrison County's expenditures for the fiscal year ending October 1, and observed the following:

That that county spent for education, $253,644.63; for roads, $224,684.72 of which $113,547.54 went for salaries and wages, and that the total expenditures by the supervisors were $1,743,938.02. And judging by the items carried in the budget for next year, we are led to believe that something like four hundred thousand of the total was for interest and bonds.

Now Harrison county is no exception. What it is spending is but a fair example of what other counties of the state are spending. We are wondering how many are counting the cost and how many have stopped to consider the financial abyss or precipice towards which the taxpayers of the state are headed if we keep "riding" and ever anon yield to the cry, to "step on the gas".

THE INDICTMENT OF KENTUCKY'S GOVERNOR.

As we get it from the press, Gov. Sampson of Kentucky has been indicted because, as a member of the state text book commission, he accepted sample books from publishers. If that is all, there is absolutely nothing in the charge and it is a reflection on the great state of Kentucky which has furnished a Clay, a Watterson, a Carlisle, a Beck and a Breckenridge to the Nation. How in the heck was the Governor or any one else to pass on the text books unless they had copies to review. It has been the custom for years for publishers to furnish books for examination just as one would furnish samples of corn, peas or potatoes or anything else.

WALKER WOOD PLAYED A WINNING HAND.

We once heard the story of a fertile brain son of Ham who said, "I got myself scused in order to git de tention of de womin". Had our good friend Walker Wood set a trap for Gov. Bilbo whereby he got himself "scused" in order to more thoroughly establish himself in the confidence of the state, had he planned that sort of a scheme, it could be said that its execution has been working on all cylinders.

The truth is that we never did take the matter seriously. We have been so confident of his rectitude of official conduct that we have not thought it worth while to cumber space about the investigation. If the charges had been not so absolutely unreasonable, we would have thought that Walker ought to be tapped for the simples. In brief, Walker has got himself reelected secretary of state with just a "howdy do". We have believed in you old fellow; we believe in you now and congratulate you on the trap you sprung.

SENATOR STEPHENS BACK IN WASHINGTON.

The many friends and admirers of Senator Hubert Stephens have shared with him his anxiety over the protracted illness of one of his sons which has prevented the Senator returning to Washington for the remainder of the special session until now. It is reassuring to the Senator's constituency and to the country generally the Senator is back in Washington. He does things that are worth while and is a level headed statesman who is serving his people wisely and well.

CATCH THE POLITICAL PARSON.

We see it stated that there is to be an official investigation of campaign expenditures in the state of Virginia to ascertain who got and who did not get campaign money last year, and it is said that the political parson in that state will not be overlooked. We have also seen it suggested that the investigation be extended to Mississippi to see just how many handled political funds here last year. We will wager a dollar to a doughnut that when it does begin in Mississippi we shall see some political parsons ducking or dodging. Turn on the blessed sunlight of publicity.

REVELATIONS AS TO BILBO'S CAMPAIGN FUNDS

The house special investigating committee has been digging in on Gov. Bilbo's campaign expenses during the last state primary to see who footed the bills.

The Sentinel repeatedly urged during the progress of that campaign that the legislature make a thorough investigation of the sources which furnished the funds for all the candidates. After the second primary, we ran a series of editorials on the same subject and gave what we thought some mighty good reasons for looking behind the scenes. We are still of the opinion expressed then.

The Bible says charity begins at home. It is therefore but in keeping with Holy Writ to say that the first thing which concerns Grenadians is the welfare and the prosperity of Grenada.

DIGESTIVE TROUBLES SPEEDILY ENDED

Eat What You Like and as Much as You Want

Practically every case of indigestion and kindred disorders, is due to fermentation (souring of food). If you are to get permanent relief, the cause of the trouble must be eliminated. This can only be done by an antiseptic.

GORDON'S, an internal antiseptic, does that very thing, and promptly, too. It drives out the acids and poisons—makes the stomach like new.

For quick relief from indigestion, dyspepsia, excess acid, gas, bloating, heartburn, sour stomach, that "tired feeling," you'll find this remarkable remedy surprisingly effective.

We believe the said Joliff has now atoned for any breach of the law to which he might have been a party; that he has made a good prisoner and his conduct in every respect has been exemplary; that if granted his freedom, we believe he will hereafter make the State an upright, law-abiding citizen, and for these reasons most earnestly request Executive Clemency at your hands.

Respectfully submitted,

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Rev. P. B. Fitzwater, D. D.
Dean, Moody Bible Institute of Chicago
(62, 1929, Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for October 6

GOLDEN TEXT—Look not every man on his own things, but every man on the things of others.
LESSON TEXT—Mark 12:28-34; James 2:14-17.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Helping One Another.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Helping One Another.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Do We Owe to Others?

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Fulfilling Our Obligation to Others.

The sum total of human duty as set forth by Christ in Matthew 22: 34-40 is love to God and one's neighbor. This comprehends every conceivable relationship and responsibility of life. The measure of love to God is the whole capacity of man to love. The measure of love to one's neighbor is one's love for himself.

1. Loving God (Mark 12:28-30).
Man's first duty is to God. The word which sums up his duty to God is love. By loving is meant a sincere desire for and a delight in the welfare of the one loved, and a willingness to do everything possible to further it. Love is not a sentimental emotion, but an ardent passion which absolutely sways the one who loves. When one is swayed by the passion to please, honor and glorify God, he is loving Him with his whole heart, strength and mind. To fail to render full obedience to this, the first and great commandment, is to be guilty of committing the greatest sin. By this test we can readily estimate our freedom from sin. Determined by this standard, all are guilty before God. We should put God first in business, recreations and relationships in life.

2. Loving Our Neighbor (Mk. 12: 31-34).
This obligation is like unto the obligation to God in that it centers in love. The measure of love is not the same. The measure of love to God is the absolute limit of human capacity. That unto our neighbor is "as thyself." Our neighbor is a finite being, therefore the love is not absolute. Who is my neighbor? This is answered by the story of the good Samaritan in Luke 10:30-37. Our neighbor is one who is in need of our help. It is not a question of where he lives, but of his need of help. Some of the ways we can love our neighbor, as suggested by the texts selected by the lesson committee, are:

1. By co-operation (Neh. 4:15-23).
The walls of Jerusalem needed to be rebuilt. The task was great and the enemies strong. Nehemiah could not have done it alone, though working all the days of his life, but "everyone unto his work" made the walls a reality in a short time. Racial solidarity is a reality. "No man liveth unto himself; therefore human life is lived at its best in co-operation with another. This is not only taught in Scripture, but is illustrated in the habits of ants. They are small insects, very weak, yet by joining together their forces they accomplish great tasks.

2. By the strong bearing the infirmities of the weak (Rom. 15:1-7).
By this means we build up each other. We are given strength, not to use for ourselves, but that we may help sustain the weak. We are not to please ourselves. Our supreme example in this is Jesus Christ. If He had pleased Himself, he never would have come down to earth, taken our nature and suffered the shame of the cross. The rich are to help the poor. Indeed, some are made rich in order that they may intelligently and sympathetically render helpful service to the poor.

3. By rendering lowly service (Phil. 2:1-11).
The supreme business of life is to serve, not to be served. Christ came not to be ministered unto, but to minister (Mark 10:45). Christ, though equal with God, humbled himself to become the servant of men. The human mind is naturally selfish, therefore the only way man can possibly render lowly service to others is to have the mind of Christ. The only way this mind can be in us is as Christ is in us. The Lord of our lives. This kind of service must spring out of the life of the one who is in Christ and in whom Christ dwells.

4. By rendering justice to everyone (Col. 3:12; 4:1).
All our fellows have rights which must be recognized to accomplish which the elect of God must put on a mind of mercy and kindness (Col. 3:12). This kind of treatment finds illustration in our home relationships—wives and husbands, parents and children, masters and servants. Failure to render justice is a source of discord and confusion.

5. By giving to others (Jas. 2:14-17).
Christianity shows itself in practical living and charitable giving. To profess to have faith and to be destitute of practical deeds is to give the lie to our profession.

To be Up-to-Date
Means to be Up-to-Chrysler

When anything new is produced, there are always those who create and those who follow.

In the change to balloon tires, some makers asserted the new type would never succeed. Four-wheel brakes found some who disastrously supported the two-wheel design. And today, there are engineers who decry the Multi-Range Gear Shift and the Down-Draft carburetor.

Chrysler has never been among those who shun new things—if the new be better than the old.

The public acclaim for Chrysler, instead, has been based on Chrysler's pioneering or ready acceptance of those new creations which have made motoring safer, more comfortable, surer and more economical.

To be always ahead of or abreast of the times, but never to experiment on the public is the real foundation of Chrysler success.

You who prefer the latest, the most advanced, the best, have made Chrysler the most copied car in the world. Because Chrysler has built the kind of cars you up-to-the-minute people want, you have given Chrysler the greatest success in the history of automobile building. We invite your most critical inspection.

An Unpleasant Subject

All of the functions of life are not pleasant to consider. Perhaps this is why some mothers refuse to think that such symptoms as restless sleep, loss of flesh, lack of appetite or itching nose and fingers in their children, can be caused by round or pin worms. Many mothers have proven, however, that a few doses of White's Cream Vermifuge, that sure and harmless worm expellant, will make these symptoms disappear. You can get White's Cream Vermifuge for 25 cents per bottle from CORNER DRUG STORE.

Mr. T. G. Salmon, who has been with the engineering department of the Mississippi Power & Light Co. at Jackson, for some months has accepted a place in a like department with the Cotton Belt Railroad Co. at an increased salary. This is gratifying to the good parents of this young man and his lovely wife, and is more than pleasing to his many friends in Grenada. He made good with the Mississippi Power & Light Co. and the only reason for a change was that of a much increased compensation.

The many Grenada friends of Mrs. Fox Simpson of Oxford, regret to learn that it was necessary for her to undergo a serious surgical operation Wednesday at Oxford, but will be gratified to know that she stood the operation fine, and is going nicely since.

Misses Billie Tucker and Ida Terrell Higdon and Messrs. Jukey Smith, Vaniz and Grant Evans of Canton, were Grenada visitors Sunday, the guests of Miss Max-yne Cathey.

SICK AT HIS STOMACH

"I WAS suffering from stomach trouble in 1917," says Mr. C. K. Nelson, a railroad engineer living in Pulaski, Va. "I had a tightness in my chest, a shortness of breath. There seemed to be a heavy weight in the pit of my stomach, and quite a bit of nausea, yet I couldn't vomit. I tried different remedies, yet suffered on just the same. When in West Virginia on a work-in, I was in such a condition that I just gave up and came home. I could not stand to work in my condition. Some one told me about Black-Draught. I started taking it in small doses after meals. It helped me, and I went back to work."

20th Century Meets.

The Twentieth Century Club met Tuesday afternoon, October 1, with Mrs. W. H. Kirk, as hostess. Her attractive home on Margin Street was beautifully decorated with fall flowers.

It was perhaps the best meeting of the year with every member exception present. There were seven visitors. The club was especially grateful to Misses Catherine Lufkin and Thelma Jackson for the two lovely musical selections they so skillfully rendered. Miss Lufkin played "Gondolieri" from Noyon and Miss Jackson sang "Mystery", accompanied at the piano by Miss Lufkin.

The program dealt with Benjamin Franklin as a statesman. Those taking part and discussing the different phases of Franklin's life were: Mrs. John Keeton, Mrs. F. S. York, Mrs. J. J. Duke, Mrs. O. L. Kimbrough, Mrs. Jack Sanderson, Mrs. Earl Bailey and Mrs. E. A. Penn. Each gave a most interesting and informative discussion.

The members responded to the roll call with quotations from Franklin.

At the close of the program the hostess served a delicious salad and iced cake. Besides Miss Lufkin and Miss Jackson the guests at the club were: Mrs. W. W. Batson and Misses Ruth G. Bale, Virginia Thomas, Margaret Harris and Katherine Johnston.

Miss Bass Has Club.
The Wednesday bridge club met this week with Mrs. E. L. Bass.

Her lovely home on Snider Street was decorated with beautiful pink roses from her garden.

After the games, Mrs. Jim Horn, who held highest score, was presented an attractive silhouette. Mrs. Donald Sharp cut consolation, a set of bridge pencils.

For the party, Mrs. Bass used matching tallies, cards and score pads.

A delectable salad course was served the club members and the four special guests, who were Mrs. E. R. Berkley, Mrs. F. S. Hill, Mrs. R. C. Trusty and Mrs. Bruce Newsum.

Messrs. Dipper Smithson and Bernard Lowenberg, of Kosciusko, and Sam Presby of Okolona, were visitors to Grenada Saturday. They were on their way to the American Legion convention at Louisville, Ky.

Miss Holder Entertains.

On Monday evening, at the home of her parents on South Street, Miss Elizabeth Holder delightfully entertained the preachers' daughters who are attending Grenada College this year.

The reception rooms were made very attractive with a variety of fall flowers, red dahlias and yellow daisies predominating.

As the guests arrived, they were served delicious punch by Miss Sara Cunningham and Mr. Kenneth Tucker. The punch bowl was banked with dahlias and greenery.

The girls formed a preachers' daughters' club, calling it the "Preachers' Kids' Klub". Its organization follows the line of the Methodist church, having a bishop at its head, and a number of presiding elders. Miss Holder was chosen as bishop and Misses Frances Baker, Mary Charlotte Clark, Louise McCorkle, Lela Belle McIlwain, and Mildred Stephens were picked for the presiding elders.

Since Methodist preachers are so fond of chicken, each was presented a box of chicken bones.

Several contests were enjoyed during the evening. The "get acquainted contest", furnished a great deal of amusement. In this the person who in ten minutes time got the largest number of names with their home address, birthday, native state and the color of their eyes, was declared winner. Miss Katherine Johnston was most successful, learning in that short a time the required facts about 27 persons.

An intelligence test, when completed spelled the sentence, "Refreshments are Ready" and the hostess, assisted by her mother, served her guests a tempting salad course.

The guest list included: Mrs. D. L. Wilson, Mrs. John Brown Owens, Misses Margaret Harris, E. Faye Griffith, Bessie Ferguson, Katherine Johnston, Ena Chapman, Frances Baker, Mary Charlotte Clark, Sara Cunningham, Nancy Ruth Dods, Muriel and Lenora Gregory, Mary Harris, Eustace Henderson, Grace and Carl Henry, Katherine Lockhart, Agnes and Katherine Martin, Elizabeth Mohler, Louise McCorkle, Lela Belle McIlwain, Beulah Northington, Ruth and Ann Russell, Mildred Stephens, Ruby Wallace, Virginia Wasson, Lucile Roberts, Lois Humphreys and Minnie May Armour. Miss Allean Ramsey, Mr. Kenneth Tucker and the Rev. and Mrs. J. H. Holder were also present to share the evening's pleasures.

Stunt Night at College.
Stunt night at the college last Saturday night proved a most entertaining affair, provoking a great deal of merriment among spectators.

The judges, who were Mrs. E. R. Proudfoot and Mrs. R. F. Matthews, had difficulty in choosing between the faculty and the freshmen stunts. The faculty stunt was a comic royal court scene, and the freshmen presented an artist painting the different months of the year. The senior, junior and sophomore stunts were also splendid and were thoroughly enjoyed.

Miss Bessie Tucker, of Columbus, who has been visiting her niece, Mrs. Henry Pope, returned home Monday with Mr. Pope, who had to go over on business.

Mrs. J. P. Brooks and Mrs. R. N. Brooks, with Mrs. C. V. Gibson and Mrs. Fulton McRee, of Holcomb, were visitors to Greenwood Monday.

Master James Hamilton Caldwell, III, has returned to his home in Charleston after a visit with his aunt, Mrs. Donald Sharp.

Mrs. Leo Wainwright left Monday at noon for Hammond, La. to visit her father, Mr. J. S. Parker.

Circle No. 3 of the Methodist Missionary Society met Monday afternoon with Mrs. Robert Sharp. Mrs. T. J. Brown led the mission study "Friends of Africa". At the close of a social half hour, delicious home made cream and cake were served.

Little Miss Josephine Thomas and her brother, Wilmer, Jr., of Vicksburg, who had been visiting their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Thomas, for several weeks, returned to their home Monday with their father, who had come up the day before for them.

Mrs. Henry Harden and son, Edwin, and Mrs. S. J. Smith, of Scooba, came last Saturday to see their sister and aunt, Mrs. H. L. Honeycutt, who has been so seriously ill. They stayed until Monday and were the guests while here of Mr. and Mrs. Jimmie Shaw.

Mr. and Mrs. John Keeton spent Sunday in Jackson.

Mrs. John Keeton has as her guest this week her sister, Mrs. H. Winborn, of Victoria, Texas.

Messrs. Darrow Horn and George Blaylock were Memphis visitors the first of the week.

The Civic League will meet Tuesday afternoon, Oct. 9, at 4 o'clock with Mrs. C. C. Penn. All members are requested to be present.

Dangerous Business

Our stomach and digestive systems are lined with membrane which is delicate, sensitive and easily injured. It is dangerous business, then, to use medicines containing harsh drugs, salts or minerals, when we are constipated. In addition to the possibility of injuring the lining of our digestive system, these medicines give only temporary relief and may prove habit forming. The safe way to relieve constipation is with Herbine, the cathartic that is made from herbs, and acts in the way nature intended. You can get Herbine at CORNER DRUG STORE

Helping Business

"Live and let live" is a well-regarded maxim of business life. Let us see how it relates to the railroads.

The railroads are not content that other lines of business shall merely live. They want business to be prosperous, and through their service they help others to prosper.

The present trend of the nation's business is an illustration. Few lines of business lack a measure of prosperity; most of them are doing better than ever before; the average is highly satisfactory. It is generally recognized that the progress of the railroads has contributed greatly to this favorable situation. There have been plenty of cars and locomotives and other facilities. The time of freight in transit has been reduced from weeks to days and from days to hours. Passenger trains have been speeded up. Schedules of all kinds are maintained with remarkable exactness. The improved speed and dependability of railway service have reduced inventories, stabilized prices and promoted regularity of supply and demand.

The rule necessarily works both ways. The railroads must prosper in order to help other lines of business to prosper.

Constructive criticism and suggestions are invited.

PAINS Went Away

"I WAS very much run-down in health. I had a dreadful ache across the middle of my back. I had a dull, tired feeling, and I dreaded the thought of having to do my household tasks. I was tired when I got up in the morning. I got no rest from my sleep, and I was sleepy all day long.

"Go fetch the priest," said he, and thus dashed that faint, shy one, Messer Lorenzo, had been hearing that the place might contain a priest, and that these men, being faithful children of Mother church, would never dare to slay a man who asked for a priest.

Bernardo went. He gained the chapel door on the very pronouncement of the "He Missa Est," just as the morning mass was ended, and in the threshold, in his haste, he fell but stumbled against a lady in black who was coming forth attended by two women. He drew aside and muttered himself against the wall, muttering words of apology.

But the lady did not at once pass on.

"Why all this haste to the chapel?" quoth she, accounting it strangely unusual in one of Tolentino's men.

"Messer Father Girolamo is required," said he. "There is a man about to die who must be shriven."

"A man?" said she, with a show of tender solicitude, concealing that one of the all-too-slender carlson had been wounded to the death.

"Ay, a captain of Valentinos—the Lorenzo Castrocara—who came after in the night. And," he added, vaingloriously, "it was I, Madonna, who took him."

But the lady Bianca de' Fioravanti never heard his last words. She fell back a step and rested, as if for support, against one of the decorative pillars of the porch. Her face had become deathly white, her eyes stared dully at the soldier.

"What?" she asked, in a low voice.

"What is his name, did you say?" she faltered.

"Lorenzo Castrocara—a captain of Valentinos," he repeated.

"Lorenzo Castrocara?" she said, a her turn, but on her lips the name seemed another, so different, did she utter it.

"Ay, Madonna," he replied.

Suddenly she gripped his arm, so that she hurt him.

"And he is wounded—to the death?" she cried with a sudden greenness, as it seemed to him.

"Nay, not wounded. He is to die, having been captured. That is all, lesser Tolentino will have him amputated from the neck. You will have a good view from the battlements, Madonna. It is—"

She released his arm, and fell back from him in horror, cutting short his praise of the entertainment provided.

"Take me to your captain," she commanded.

He stared at her, bewildered. And the priest?" he inquired.

"Let that wait. Take me to your captain."

The command was so imperative that he dared not disobey her. He bowed, muttering in his beard, and, turning, went up the passage gain, and so out into the courtyard, and the lady and her women following.

Across the intervening space, Madonna Bianca's eyes met the proud glance of Messer Lorenzo's, and saw the sudden abatement of that ride, saw the faint flush that stirred at sight of her in those ale cheeks. For to the young man this was a startling apparition, seeing that—as Cesare Borgia had been careful to provide—he had no knowledge or even suspicion of her presence in San Leo.

A moment she paused, looked at him, her soul in her eyes; then she went forward, past Bernardo, her women ever following her. Thus came she, very pale but very resolute of mien, to the captain of her fortress.

Messer Tolentino bowed profoundly, uncovering and at once explaining the situation.

"Here is a young adventurer, Madonna, whom we captured last night within these walls," said he. "He is a captain in the service of Cesare Borgia."

She looked at the prisoner again standing rigid before her, and from the prisoner to her officer.

"How came he here?" she asked, her voice curiously strained.

"He climbed the rock on the southern side at the risk of his neck," said Tolentino.

"And what sought he?"

"His what we cannot precisely ascertain," Tolentino admitted. "Nor will he tell us. When captured last night he pretended to be an envoy from Duke Guidobaldo, which plainly he was not. That was but a subterfuge to escape the consequences of his rashness."

And the captain explained with a pardonable parade of his own shrewdness, how he had at once perceived that had Messer Lorenzo been what he pretended, there would have been no need for him to have come to San Leo thus, in secret.

"Nor need to risk his neck, as you have said, by climbing the southern side, had he been employed by Cesare Borgia," said the lady.

"That is too hasty a conclusion, Madonna," Tolentino answered. "It is only on the southern side that it is possible to climb the wall; and along the summit itself there is no way round."

"To what end, then, do you conceive that he came?"

"To what end? Why, to what end but to betray the castle into the hands of the Borgia troops?" cried Tolentino, a little out of patience at such a superfluity of questions.

"You have proof of that?" she asked him, a rising infection in her voice.

"To common sense no proof is needed of the obvious," said he, sententiously, snorting a little as he spoke, out of his resentment of this feminine interference in men's affairs. "We are about to fling him back the way he came," he ended with a certain grim finality.

But Madonna Bianca paid little heed to his manner.

"Not until I am satisfied that his intentions were as you say," she replied; and her tone was every whit as firm as his, and was treated with a subtle reminder that she was the mistress paramount of San Leo, and he no more than the castellan.

Tolentino glowered and shrugged.

"Oh, as you please, Madonna. Yet I would make bold to remind you that my ripe experience teaches me best how to deal with such a matter."

The girl looked that war-worn veteran boldly in the eye.

"Knowledge, sir captain, is surely of more account than mere experience."

His jaw fell.

"You mean that you—that you have knowledge of why he came?"

"It is possible," said she, and turned from the astonished captain to the still more astonished prisoner.

Daintily she stepped up to Messer Lorenzo, whose deep sapphire eyes glowed now as they regarded her, reflecting some of the amazement in which he had listened to her words. He had weighed them, seeking to solve the riddle they contained, and—be it confessed at once—wondering how he might turn the matter to his profit in this present desperate pass.

I fear you may discover here something of the villain in Messer Lorenzo. And I admit that he showed himself but little a hero of romance in that his first thought now was how he might turn to account the lady's interest in him. But if it was not exactly heroic, it since, although accounting her far beyond his adventurer's reach. She looked at him in silence for a moment. Then, with a calm too complete to be other than assumed, she spoke.

"Will you give me your arm to the battlements, Messer Lorenzo?" A scarlet flush leaped to his cheeks; he stepped forward briskly to her side. Tolentino would still have interrupted.

"Consider, Madonna," he began.

But she waved him peremptorily aside; and, after all, she was the mistress in San Leo.

Side by side the prisoner and the lady paramount moved away toward the staircase that led up to the embattled parapet. Tolentino growled his impatience, cursed himself for being a woman's lackey, dismissed his men in a rage, and sat down by the well in the center of the courtyard to await the end of that precious interview.

Leaning on the embattled wall, looking out over the vast, sunlit Emilia plain, Madonna Bianca broke at last the long spell of silence that had endured between herself and Castrocara.

"I have brought you here, Ser Lorenzo," she said, "that you may tell me the true object of your visit to San Leo." Her eyes were averted from his face, her bosom heaved gently, her voice quivered never so slightly.

He cleared his throat to answer her. His resolve was now clear and definite.

"I can tell you what I did not come to do, Madonna," he answered, and his accents were almost harsh. "I did not come to betray you into the hands of your enemies. Of that I here make oath as I hope for the salvation of my soul."

It may seem perjury at the first glance; yet it was strictly true, if not the whole truth. As we have seen, he had not dreamt that she was in San Leo, or that in delivering up the castle to Della Volpe's men he would be delivering up Madonna Bianca. Had he known of her presence, he would not, it is certain, have accepted the task. Therefore was he able to swear as he had done, and to swear truly, though he suppressed some truth.

"That much I think I knew," she answered gently.

The words and the tone if they surprised him emboldened him in his deceit, urged him along the path to which already he had set his foot. At no other time—considering what he was, and what she was—would he have dared so much. But his was now the courage of the desperate. He stood to die, and nothing in life daunts him who is face to face with death. He threw boldly that he might at the eleventh hour win back the right to live.

"Ah, ask me not why I came," he implored her hoarsely. "I have dared much, thinking that I dared all. But now—here before you, under the glance of your angel eyes—my courage fails me. I am become a coward who was not afraid when they brought me out to die."

"Look, Madonna," he held out his hands, bruised, swollen and gashed. "I am something in this state from head to foot." He turned. "Look yonder." And he pointed down the sheer face of the cliff. "The way I came last night—in the dark, risking death at every step. You see that ledge, where there is scarce room to stand. Along that ledge I crept, to yonder wider space, and thence I leapt across that little gap. She shuddered as she followed his tale.

"By that crevice I came upward, tearing knees and elbows, and so until I had gained the platform on the southern side, there."

"How brave!" she cried.

"How mad!" said he. "I show you this that you may know what courage then was mine, what indomitable impulse drove me hither. You would not think, Madonna, that having braved so much, I should falter now, and yet—"

He stopped, and covered his face with his hands.

She drew nearer, sliding toward him. "And yet?" said she softly and encouragingly.

"Oh! I dare not!" he cried out. "I was mad—mad!" And then by chance his tongue stumbled upon the very words to suit his case. "Indeed, I do not know what was the spirit of madness that possessed me."

He did not know! She trembled from head to foot at that admission. He did not know! But she knew. She knew, and hence the confidence with which she had interposed to brush Tolentino aside. For had he, died, had the executioner driven him over the ledge in that horrible death-leap, it would have been her hands that had destroyed him.

For was it not she who had bewitched him? Was it not she who had drugged him with a love-philter—the elixirum aureum procured from Messer Corvinus Trismegistus? Did she not know that it was that elixir, burning fiercely and unappeasably in his veins, that had possessed him like a madman and brought him hither, reckless of all danger, so that he might come to her?

"Poor—poor Lorenzo!" she murmured fondly.

He started round and stared at her, very white.

"Oh, Madonna!" he cried, and sank upon one knee before her. "You have surprised my secret—my unutterable secret! Ah, let me go! Let them hurl me from the rock, and so end my wretchedness!"

It was supremely well done, the villain knew; and she were no woman but a very happy di she now permit his death. He was prepared for a plying gentleness toward an affliction which she must now suppose her own beauty had inspired, and so he had looked for a kindly dismissal. But he was not prepared for such answer as she made him.

"Dear love, what are you saying? Is there no other happiness for you save that of death? Have I was undeniably human, and if I had conveyed to you any notion that Messer Castrocara was anything more than quite ordinarily human, then my task has been ill-performed indeed.

It was not so much his love of her as his love of himself, youth's natural love of life, that now showed him how he might induce her to open a door for his escape from the peril that encompassed him. And yet, lest you should come to think more ill of him than he deserves, you are to remember that he had raised his eyes to her long shown anger? Do I know aught but gladness that for me you should have dared so much?"

He gave utterance to his overwhelming amazement.

"Oh, it is impossible!" he cried; and this time there was no acting in his cry.

"What is impossible?" quoth she; and setting her hands upon his elbows, she raised him gently from his kneeling posture. "What is impossible?" she repeated when they stood face to face once more.

And now the fire in his eyes was not simulated.

"It is impossible that you should not scorn my love," said he.

"Scorn it? I? I who have awakened it—I who have desired it?"

"Desired it?" he echoed, almost in a whisper. "Desired it?"

For a spell they stood so, staring each into the other's eyes; then they fell into each other's arms, she heart to heart under the summer sky—that Messer Tolentino found them.

Marveling at the long delay, the castellan had thought it well to go after them. And what he now beheld struck him to stone, left him gaping like a foolish image.

They fell apart for very decency, and then the lady, rosy and flushed, presented Messer Lorenzo to the castellan as her future lord, and explained to him in confidence—and as she understood it—the true reason of that gentleman's visit to San Leo.

Thereafter, Messer Lorenzo was cared for as became a man of his position. A bath was prepared for him; fresh garments were found to fit him, the richest and most becoming being selected; the garrison was disappointed of its execution, and the Borgia captain went to dine at Madonna's table. For this banquet the choicest viands that the besieged commanded were forthcoming, and the rarest wines from Fioravanti's cellar were procured.

In all Italy there was no happier man in that hour than Lorenzo Castrocara, who, from the very edge of death, saw himself suddenly thrust up to the highest and best that he could have dared to ask of life. His happiness entirely engrossed his mind awhile. All else was forgotten. But suddenly, quite suddenly, remembrance flooded back upon him and left him cold with horror. He had been midway through his second song, Madonna languishing beside him, and he checked abruptly. The lute fell clattering from his grasp, which had suddenly grown nerveless.

With a startled cry his mistress leaped over him.

"Enzo! Are you ill?"

He rose precipitately.

"No, no; not ill. But—oh!" He clenched his hands and groaned.

She, too, had risen, all sweet solicitude, demanding to know what ailed him. He turned to her a face that was blank with despair.

"What have I done? What have I done?" he cried, thereby increasing her alarm.

It crossed her mind that perhaps the effect of the magician's philter was beginning to wane. Fearfully, urgently she insisted upon knowing what might be alarming him; and he, seeing himself forced to explain, paused but an instant to choose a middle course in words, to find expressions that would not betray him.

sobbing in her extreme joy, and he upon the verge of doing so, too, for, as you will perceive, it had been a very trying morning for him. And it was thus—the lady of San Leo and the Borgia captain clasped

"Across the way my neighbor's windows shine;
His roof-tree shields him from the storms that frown;
He toiled and saved to build it, staunch and brown;
And though my neighbor's house is not like mine,
I would not pull it down!"

Meeting of County Teachers.

The first regular meeting of the teachers of Grenada county for the session will be held in the Grenada High School auditorium October 12, at 10 o'clock. In order for a county school unit to develop a fine professional spirit and to carry on the work for the best interest of the various communities it is very important for the teachers of the county to come together at regular intervals to study and discuss problems that arise from time to time. It is hoped by the officials and teachers of the county to make the programs helpful, instructive and interesting.

During the past few years the development of the elementary school system has commanded much attention in Mississippi. This is a vital factor in the development of a strong county school system. Thus, at the first meeting of the county teachers, the development of the county elementary schools will be discussed. Dr. J. T. Calhoun, Rural School Supervisor, will make an address at the above time. Dr. Calhoun has given this question much study and consideration and is prepared to aid and assist the teachers with the many problems that they have in their work. All teachers are expected to attend and hear Dr. Calhoun.

The following program will be followed: Devotional, Dr. W. E. Farr; Assembly Singing, Directed by Miss Gann; Special, By Grenada Elementary School; Address, Dr. J. T. Calhoun.

Over a Billion Deadly Germs in a Single Drop of Water

Germs are so small that there may be as many as one billion, seven hundred million of them in a drop of water. And just a few of these tiny germs, if they get into your blood through a cut in your skin, may make you so sick you will be in bed for weeks—may cause the loss of a limb through blood poisoning—may even infect you with that most dreadful and fatal of diseases, lockjaw.

Just because you can see no dirt in a cut does not mean that it is clean. You cannot see germs. The only safe and sane thing to do is to thoroughly wash every cut, no matter how small, with Liquid Borozone, to kill the germs, and then dust it with Borozone Powder, to hasten the healing. Liquid Borozone costs 30 cents, 60 cents, $1.20 and $1.50; Borozone Powder, 30 cents and 60 cents, and can be had at CORNER DRUG STORE
